

Birding Trip

in PERU

"CENTRAL ANDES"

November 7-15, 2005

by Fabrice SCHMITT

Bosque Unchog, one of the rare places in the world where it's possible to see the Golden-backed Mountain-tanager, a target endemic species of the trip.

The Diademed Sandpiper-plover, a sought-after species of the High Andes.

More than 1800 species
120 endemics
76 threatened species
54 near threatened species
MORE BIRDS

Impassioned by ornithology for more than 20 years, I fell in love with the birds from South America at the time of my first trip to Peru in 1995.

Since this trip, I explored the continent by visiting almost all the countries, with the aim to discover its fauna, its flora, its people...

But Andean countries, and particularly Peru, kept my predilection. I already spent more than one year in Peru, if I add up all the trips I carried out in this country. Nevertheless, lots remain to be discovered!

Digiscoping in Amazonia.

Since July 2005 I live in Santiago of Chile, where I carry out many activities with the association of study and protection of birds UNORCH (Union de los ORnitólogos CHilenos). Professionally, I work like nature guide for Kolibri Expeditions, a travel agency specialized in birding trip in Peru and all the neighbouring countries. Gunnar Engblom, the owner of this agency, is one of the best birders of Peru. With Kolibri Expeditions, you can carry out the trip of your dreams, in Amazonia or high mountain (or both...), for long or short duration, if you are a hard core tucker or a slowpace birder !

For more information, consult <http://www.kolibriexpeditions.com> or kolibriexp@gmail.com

In December 2005, I had the pleasure, in company of Gunnar, to guide a group of the English agency NATURETREK composed by John Day, Yvon Princen, Neil Renwick Veggie, Bryan Nixon, Peter Nickless, Graham Jones, A Sims, Philip Espin, David Stoddard, Raymond Winterman and Alec Empson throughout the "Central Andes" circuit. This trip is directed to the passionate birders, who want to see a large number of bird species. "More birds" is not the slogan of Kolibri Expeditions for nothing !!

The other characteristic of this circuit is the possibility to spot a great number of "endemic" species (whose total distribution is less than 50.000 km<sup>2</sup>). And as one crosses a great number of habitats, it is possible to see a great number of species in very little time: from the 7 to November 15, we recorded 358 species of birds including 32 endemic species!

It is also possible to add day trips to this principal circuit; those who added an day trip in the coastal desert and an day trip pelagic ended up with 405 species in only 11 days.

Itinerary

November 7 - Santa Eulalia valley

Departure at 5 a.m. from Lima in the direction of the village of Santa Eulalia. From here, we went up the valley with the same name to the village of San Pedro de Casta to search for (and found!) the rare and threatened Rufous-breasted Warbling-finch. Our first stop close to the bridge of San Pedro, we found rather quickly 2 Great Inca-finch and 2 Thick-billed Miner, this last species being quite rare in this sector. From the bridge, while we were looking at a couple of Torrent Ducks sitting on a rock in the river, a member of the group discovers a Magellanic Horned Owl which resting on an outcrop!! A little further, we find 2 Peruvian Pygmy-owl, our second owl species. In the thickets and on the cultivated terraces, it is rather easy to observe some endemic species such as Rusty-bellied Brush-finch or Bronze-tailed Comet (particularly common during this day with at least 8 ind. observed) and the superb Black-necked Woodpecker.

Peruvian Pygmy-owl

We finally arrived at the site for Rufous-breasted Warbling-finch and we found 3 males and 3 females. Unfortunately, we also discover that broad pouring semi-arid brushes, habitat of this species, has just been burned by the local peasants in order to open grazing grounds for their cows.

We had a late breakfast, while an adult Condor flew over the valley.

The rest of the day we birded our way down the valley in easy pace to Lima to the search for the birds that we did not find while going up. During this first day, we already observed 7 endemic species!

Humid mountain forest, Carpish

November 8 - Carpish Tunnel - Tingo Maria

After a night spent in a sleeper bus, we arrive in the town of Huanuco on the east slope of the Andes. From there we leave for the Carpish tunnel, where a path enables us to observe the birds of the wet montane forest. The contrast to the visited areas the day before is immense here!!

We are in the jungle, where each tree is covered with moss and epiphytes. We also find our first mixed flocks of birds with sometimes more than 20 different species in only one flock! The stars of the morning will be 1 Unstreaked Tit-tyrant, many tanagers including 1 Grass-green Tanager and 2 Yellow-scarfed Tanager, 1 Plush-capped Finch and 2 Slaty Brush-finch. Later we continue to the start of the Paty trail where we take our lunch, and where it is possible to observe the birds along the road between two downpours. 2 Grey-breasted Mountain-toucan are observed during this pause.

During our way down until Tingo Maria, we observe 1 adult of Black-and-chesnut Eagle, and by stopping us at the edge of a river we find 1 adult of Fasciated Tiger-heron and 2 Sunbittern. We arrive at Tingo Maria at night fall, and we spend the night in Jennifer Lodge.

November 9 - Santa Rosa - PN "Cuevas de las lechusas" - Paty trail

Wake up at 5 a.m. to see night birds. We had a superb observation of Band-bellied Owl and Tropical Screech-owl ! A little later, we even discover, in full daylight, a Ferruginous Pygmy-owl on a electric wire. The grounds of Jennifer Lodge abound in birds. We observe a group of 7 Blue-headed Macaw, 2 Lettered Araçari, some Violaceous Jay and the endemic Huallaga Tanager. After a terrace breakfast, we went to Santa Rosa to observe a group of Hoatzin, "prehistoric" bird whose chicks have claws with the wrists to clutch itself in the branches.

The rest of the morning we pass in the "Cuevas de las Lechuzas" Tingo Maria National park, where principal attraction is the visit of a cave where several thousands of Oilbird are, a night bird close to nightjars.... but which is frugivorous and uses echolocation !

Later we are back on the tarmac road heading to the start of the Paty trail where we camp. On each trip organized by Kolibri Expeditions on this circuit, a donation is given to the community school where we sleep (installation of taps to wash the hands, construction of toilets, purchase of school material, etc). Before the night, we hear an Andean Potoo and see 2 Rufous-banded Owl, the fourth species of owl seen well in only one day.

November 10 - Paty trail - Bosque Unchog

Alarm clock again at dawn, to explore the Paty trail. This trail is absolutely fantastic, since it crosses superb pieces of wet mountain forest. Unfortunately, as everywhere on the east slope of the Andes, deforestation nibbles little by little this paradise... Hopefully, Kolibri Expeditions project to connect the Paty trail with Bosque Unchog as an eco-trekking route and create two places for overnights en route (school of Paty trail head and Ñaupamarca at the bottom of the vally) will gradually change this. Certainly, the kids of the school are much interested in the birds, as they have been given a number of binoculars from a previous group.

We observe and hear many species during this morning in particular 7 Scaly-naped Parrot, a male Long-tailed Sylph, song of Crested and Golden-headed Quetzal (unfortunately not observed), 1 Powerful Woodpecker, a pair of Uniform Antshrike, several Bay Antpitta, 1 Peruvian Tyrannulet, 1 Chesnut-breasted Wren, 2 Blackburnian Warbler, 2 Rufous-crested Tanager, etc... It is difficult to leave such an exceptional place, but we raise the camp in the afternoon to drive up to Bosque Unchog - the back way. We arrive there just before dusk and while the Kolibri staff raises the camp, we have time to observe 1 Band-winged Nightjar and 1 Swallow-tailed Nightjar.

November 11-12 - Bosque Unchog

We remain two days in the surroundings of the Unchog mountain, where we find superb elfin forests. It is here that one observes among the rarest species of Peru: Pardusco, Rufous-browed Hemispingus, Golden-backed Mountain-tanager and Bay-vented Cotinga. The landscape surroundings are absolutely sensational, and the feeling that reigns in these misty forests is unique... the name of "elfin forest" suits them exactly.

Unfortunately, these forests are threatened by deforestation. To try to protect them, Kolibri Expedition donates 20 dollars per client taken to the site to the local communities.

This makes it possible to maintain the access track to the site, and social projects of the village such as support to the local school (which has been renamed with the epitet of "Escuela ecologica") as well as implementing a health post (Posta Medica), and to sensitize people to have interest in conservation of these forests (since at least 4 years there has been NO forest fire in the elfin forest area - which undoubtedly reflects that our presence is making a difference.

Apart from the main 4 targets, other interesting species included observations of 1 male of Green-headed Hillstar and 1 male of Black-breasted Hillstar (northern range extension?), many Coppery Metaltail, 1 singing Baron's Spinetail, 2 Plenge's Thistletail, a superb observation of Stripe-headed Antpitta and many "Fulvous" Antpitta (the obscura subspecies of Rufous Antpitta which will probably be soon split), Neblina and Tshudi's Tapaculo, several Ochre-breasted Flycatcher, etc...

In the afternoon of the 12th, on the way to Huanuco where we spend the night, we also observe 1 Giant Hummingbird and a group of 5 Fasciated Wren.

November 13 - Huanuco - Carpish tunnel - Junin

We leave Huanuco towards 5 a.m. to go for the last time to the wet cloud forest at the Carpish tunnel. During this morning we encounter an absolutely fabulous mixed flock: nearly 20 different species together, including 1 male of Masked Trogon, a couple of Crimson-mantled Woodpecker, 2 Pearled Treerunner, 1 male of Barred Fruiteater, 3 Unstreaked Tit-tyrant, 2 Peruvian Wren, 2 Yellow-scarfed Tanager.... the dream of every birder !!! We also observe 5 Brown-flanked Tanager during this morning, and 1 Plush-capped Finch. Then we take the road in direction of the town of Junin, halfway between Huanuco and Lima. On the way we stop to observe the endemic Rufous-backed Inca-finch, and we make a lunch stop a Polylepis woodland where we discover 1 adult of Mountain Caracara, 2 Black-crested Tit-tyrant and 1 Giant Conebill.

We arrive at Junin after dark in an environment much cooler than this morning, since Junin is more than 4000 m of altitude!

November 14 - Junin lake - San Mateo

The Junin lake is an immense lake of more than 150 km<sup>2</sup> located at more than 4000m of altitude. Its shores is home for tens of thousands of water birds, and among them an apterous and endemic species of the lake, the Junin Grebe. The total population of this species unfortunately strongly dropped because of the pollution caused by the mining companies, and it is estimated that it currently remains around 300 ind. in all.... this species is strongly threatened of extinction (an endemic frog species of the lake has already disappeared). A natural reserve was created to try to preserve the richness of this lake, but pollution continues and the population of Junin Grebe does not show a sign of increase.

At the time of our visit, the water level of the lake was particularly low, and it was necessary to walk nearly 3 km, sometimes in mud or the reeds, to arrive to the lake shore where we observe 2 individuals of the so rare grebe ! We also observe many species of water birds: more than 200 Puna Ibis, 45 Chilean Flamingo, many ducks, some Wilson's Phalarope which winter here, and splendid Many-colored Rush-tyrant.

During the afternoon, we carry on our road towards San Mateo. On the way we observe 2 Ornate Tinamou, 2 Giant Coot, and 1 Semipalmated Plover

(this migrating species is extremely rare in the High Andes).

November 15 - Ticlio Bog - Santa Eulalia - Pantanos de Villa

We begin our day with the visit of a bog of altitude, right under the Ticlio pass. It is there that we observe 6 ind. of White-bellied Cinclodes whose known world population is less than 40 ind. (even extrapolating all suitable bogs within its habitat it is unlikely that the total possible population is more than a couple of hundred individuals), and 1 adult of the superb Diademed Sandpiper-plover!!

Other species of high-mountain will be observed during this day: 3 Plain-breasted Earthcreeper, 1 Junin Canastero, some White-fronted Ground-tyrant and White-winged Diuca-finch, etc... the surprise being the discovery of 1 Golden-spotted Ground-dove, rather rare in this part of the Andes. Then we go down in direction of Lima, while passing again by the Santa Eulalia valley, where we observe a troop of 15 Spot-winged Pigeon, and during a stop close to a Polylepis woodland, some Black Metaltail, 1 Striated Earthcreeper and 1 D' Orbigny's Chat-tyrant.

We finish this day, started at more than 4600m of altitude, at the seaside in the small reserve of Pantanos de Villa.

We observe there many water birds of water and in particular thousands of Franklin's Gull coming to winter on the Peruvian coasts.

Among the hundreds of ducks, grebes, herons, coots and gulls, we even observe an adult of Red-gartered Coot... a vagrant bird in Peru (first mention) coming from the south of South America !!

White-bellied Cinclodes
one of the rarest species of the world !

Lists of the recorded species:

You will find below 4 lists of birds recorded during the following circuits:

- ✓ main circuit "Central Andes" from 7 to November 15 (page 7 to 14)
- ✓ pelagic on November 6 (page 15)
- ✓ day trip in Lomas de Lachay, Paraiso and Ventanilla on November 16 (page 16)

As well a list on page 17, of the 49 species of birds observed during the trip and regarded as endemic or threatened (BirdLife criteria).

These lists were extracted from the data base BirdingPeru <http://www.birding-peru.com/> and thus follow the systematic order of this data base. A click on the name of species takes along you directly on the BirdingPeru data base (if you are connected to Internet) and gives you the distribution of the species in Peru and some recent records). You will also find the justification and reasoning for some of the liberal splits of this list..
